

Short Bio

Harold Riemer is currently Professor and Dean in the Faculty of Kinesiology and Health Studies (KHS) at the University of Regina (Saskatchewan, Canada). The Faculty of KHS has responsibility for academic programs (900 UG students), recreation/intramural/camp programming for the University, and oversight of varsity and club sport on behalf of the University. The Faculty also provides significant outreach programming through the Centre for Health, Wellness, & Sport. Born and raised in the Edmonton (Alberta, Canada), he began his academic career at in 1994 as an assistant professor at Bowling Green State University (Ohio) and at the University of Texas – Austin (1996) prior to moving to Saskatchewan in 1999. During his career, he has served administratively as graduate coordinator, director of a survey research unit, associate dean, and in his current role as dean. His research and teaching interests lie in the area of leadership that takes place in sport contexts – specifically the role of coach(es) in a team context. He is particularly interested in the impact leaders (or groups of leaders) can have on individuals, teams, and organizations. Harold has been married for 35 years to Tammy and they have three adult children. He is passionate about early mornings and enjoys taking on construction projects, baking European style bread, hunting, fishing, and walking outdoors.