The NAKHE 2023 Leadership Development Workshop was a Huge Success

Several of our members enjoyed NAKHE's 2023 Leadership Development Workshop (LDW) July 12-14 in Jacksonville, FL. Kudos to our host institution, Jacksonville University, and LDW Chair Mark Tillman for a great two days of programming and fun.

Leadership Development Workshop (LDW) 2023 Highlights

A MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

Dear Members,

Much has happened within NAKHE over the past several weeks. I enjoyed attending our Leader Development Workshop at Jacksonville University, which focused on how we as faculty/administrators within academic settings can be entrepreneurial in our thinking. Thanks to Dean Mark Tillman and his staff for making the event so fun and smoothly run. Next summer's LDW will be at the University of Alabama – Huntsville. We also welcome Dr. Donna Woolard as NAKHE's new Executive Director. After 12 years of service,

Executive Director Carrie Sampson Moore has decided to step down. Donna has been a long-time member and servant of our organization and has been serving as our membership manager and webmaster for some time. Please join me in congratulating Donna on her new role!

I recently finished reading Game of Edges: The Analytics Revolution and the Future of Professional Sports by Bruce Schoenfeld. The book explains how data analytics has revolutionized professional sports and much decision-making has been taken away from coaches and given to what the data predicts will be the best outcome. However, Schoenfeld also suggests that coaches have succeeded in spite of the data, recognizing that the human element is often hard to predict. For example, one coach allows his athletes to fail during the season, against all metrics that showed how they could have won, to develop resiliency in the postseason.

This is important to remember as an organization and as educators. While we sometimes must make hard decisions based on the data we're given, like awarding a low grade or cutting that funding, we must also see the broader picture and make decisions that might have positive, long-lasting effects. Let's continue to remember that as we serve people in our organization and vocation.

Meet our NAKHE New Member of the month: Erick K. Kigen

Erick K. Kigen

Assistant Professor | Health & Human Performance | Exercise Science

Affiliation: Northwestern State University, Natchitoches, Louisiana

Why are you a NAKHE member? The organization's vision & mission align with my values. NAKHE has a great reputation for supporting professional growth of young faculty members. The conferences and workshops present great leadership training and networking opportunities within the field of Kinesiology.
